High Pressure Processing is natural, environmentally friendly, and respects the ingredients so that they will maintain fresh flavor and nutrients.

Tempting Specialty Salads

HIGH PRESSURE PROCESSING (HPP)

We use a cold pasteurization technique called high pressure processing, or HPP. This is a cutting-edge, non-thermal, USDA approved technology that consists of sealing food in flexible and water-resistant material and then subjecting the food to a high level of hydrostatic pressure (pressure transmitted by water). The pressure used is equal to being at the bottom of a 60km deep ocean, if an ocean that deep were to exist! HPP has been used more and more since 2000 in all types of food industries around the world and continues to grow as a preferred method of packaging.

High Pressure Processing (HPP) Food Preservation Advantages

1. Enhanced Food Safety
2. Longer Shelf Life for Fresh Products (60 days)
3. Higher Quality
4. Clean Label, 'No Preservatives'
5. Reduced shrinkage
